Going North.

Councillor Elmer Anderson is leaving shortly for a motor trip to Wembley, to help put together the twelve-room mansion for Jac Miller which the latter had pulled down in Stony Plain some time ago. When the demolition of the structure was under way, Elmer's orders were to save the windows, doors, and casings, as the building was to be set up again up North. This he did, crating the pieces, putting his hieroglyphics on the bundles, denoting which and where they go. As Elmer holds the key to these markings, he was considered to be the proper party to solve the riddle of the markings; hence the trip.

It is possible Mr. Clarence Lory will accompany the Councillor on the trip.

This'll Be a Treat.

A special to the Edmonton Journal intimates that Premier Aberhart, who has ideas of his own about the press, its freedom, and its functions, is to express them on the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation next month. It is in connection with a series the CBC is arranging under the title "Our Canadian Heritage."

Waiting to See What Happens

In an article on the possibility of Mr. McLachlan, chairman of the recently-appointed Social Credit Board, bringing back from England with him the much-wanted Major Douglas, an Edmonton daily remarks: "Certainly 'loyalists' and 'insurgents' alike may as well forget Major Douglas. He has given no indication whatever that he even is thinking of coming to Alberta. Or is the wily Major waiting to see what happens to Mr. Aberhart at the adjourned session of the Legislature?"

Dominion Day Sports.

July First Sports Club met in the Town Hall, with Mr. George Oppertbauer in the chair:

The first order of business was the election of a secretary. Mr. Edw. Enders was elected, replacing Mr. Ed. Dannhauer. A counter attraction in town the same evening kept several sportsmen away from this meeting.

A suggestion was made that a grant of money be made to the baseball club, as baseball was the chief attraction on Sports Day. The suggestion caused considerable discussion, speeches on this subject being made by Mr. E. Anderson, Mr. S. Grant and others.

It was deemed inadvisable to discuss any important matters, so the meeting was adjourned, to meet G May 25th.

Elisher-Hartun.

On Sunday, May 23rd, at the Glory Hills Reform Church, Miss Mary Hartun, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hartun, of Glory Hills, became the bride of Andrew Elisher of Stony Plain. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. C. H. Heppert. Following the service at the church, a sumptuous wedding supper was served at the residence of the bride's parents to a host of invited guests.

Interesting Story Of Sod Houses Built By Early Pioneers Of The West

The sod-house may not be a handsome piece of architecture, and certainly there are other types of houses more comfortable and more enduring. Nevertheless, without the sod-house, the great plains of the Canadian and American West would have been even harder to settle than they were.

Pioneers turned to sod because of the absence of the necessary wood or stone, and sod turned out to be not the worst possible building material. It was made tough by the roots of the wild vegetation and it could be handled in strips as long as the builder wished. Walls built of sod were proof against fire and wind and were quite resistant to the heat of summer and the cold of winter. When the top was protected from rain by a roof, a sod-house was fairly durable.

In connection with the use of sod for houses, it is interesting to note that "The Columbia Encyclopedia" finds here the source of one of the most common slang expressions.

It seems that some settlers did not realize that sod walls must have a "bat" for protection from the rain. These people built fences, as well as houses, of sod, whereupon rain soon made an unsightly line of mud and tangled roots out of such fences. There then came into being the expression, "homely as a mud fence," suggested by these broken down sod fences.

To realize the importance of sod-houses in the conquest of the West is not, however, to appreciate the specific problems involved when any one pioneer set out to erect his new home out of the good earth. Such a story will be found in "Sodhouse Days: Letters from a Kansas Homesteader, 1877-78." (Columbia University Press.)

The homesteader in question was Howard Ruede, who left his home in Bethlehem, Pa., to make a home in Kansas. He wrote about daily letters to his family back East, and in 1928 these letters were discovered by John Lee of the University of Kansas, who had now edited them in this volume.

Ruede tells all the details of cutting the sod, building the walls, putting up the ridgepole, etc. On April 10, 1877, he told his family just what his new house had cost him. The total was $10.05, divided as follows: "Ridgepole and hauling, $1.50; rafters and straw, $5.00; 2 lb. nails, 15c; hinges, 20c; window, 75c; total cash paid, $4.05. Then there was $4 worth of lumber, which was paid for in work, and $1.50 for hauling it over, which, together with hauling and firewood, $5.00, makes $10.05 for a place to live in and firewood enough to last all summer."

One wonders if information like this is not lying hidden and deteriorating in family chests in the attics of Ontario homes, or even in fragmentary diaries and account books in portfolios stowed so carefully, away they have been forgotten, in Western Canadian cupboards and boxes. If so, one hopes that enthusiastic amateur historians will discover and preserve them before they get inadvertently destroyed. It is from such documents that such source material. And in Western Canada the already available material is so skimpy to have any supplementary papers or records accidentally lost.

Just A Misunderstanding

Wrath Of Hotel Guest Was Interpreted As Applause

A commercial traveller put up for the night at a small country inn. In the breakfast-room the following morning he was asked by the landlord how he had enjoyed the cornet-playing in the next bedroom during the night.

"Enjoyed it?" was the reply. "I should think not, indeed. Why, I spent half the night pounding on the wall to make that fellow stop."

"I'm afraid there's been a misunderstanding," said the landlord, stiffly. "The cornet player told me that the person in the next room applauded him so heartily that he played every piece he knew five times over."—London Tit-Bits.

Creates Own Career

Woman Has Built Up Practice As Plant Physician

Dr. Cynthia Westcott is probably the first woman and one of the first persons of either sex to build up a regular practice as a plant physician. She began her career almost by accident. Her college years at Wellesley were followed by ten years of graduate work at Cornell and then a year of studying Sclerotinia (a fungus genus) in nearly all the swamps of Europe.

Returning at the beginning of the depression, Dr. Westcott found Cornell without further funds to employ a nursemaid for Sclerotinia. Someone suggested the need of a practical garden physician. "Many of us can thank the depression for the courage to start new ventures," Dr. Westcott said. "I decided that if I were going to take a plunge in the dark, I would find a place where I would have to dive in beyond my depth and either sink or swim." She bought an old garden at Glen Ridge, New Jersey, fully equipped with all common plant diseases. She hung out a shingle as a "plant doctor," with hours for consultation. She announced public lectures.

To-day Dr. Westcott regularly looks after gardens of all types and sizes throughout the northeastern states and employs two assistants. She recently took another forward step in her career, writing a book on her work, "The Plant Doctor."

Starts New Industry

Southern Alberta Farmers Are Growing Mustard For Seed

South Alberta is going to add a little to the favor of living. We're growing our own mustard now. Two Warner farmers have aped things up by growing 30,000 pounds of mustard seed of commercial variety, which was shipped east the other day to a manufacturing concern there to be processed into the ingredient which is the running mate of ham.

Now, South Alberta has been raising mustard for a long time, but it wasn't that kind. Heretofore our mustard has been the tumbling sort on the ball variety on which the farmers wreaked their vengeance, too often in vain. Tumbling mustard and ball mustard are weeds, and they seem to grow very well when little else will. We hope the same persistence is to be noted in the new commercial variety. If so, South Alberta can promise to make things hot for the whole world, and mustard politics should be within the purview of everyone.—Lethbridge Herald.

Want Something For Nothing

Probably Reason Why People Are Victims Of Schemers

Perhaps Barnum was right in insisting that the public likes to be fooled. But it may also be expected that the desire to get something for nothing is part of the reason why so many persons are victimized. At any rate, K. P. Aldrich, chief of postal agents and dean of federal sleuths, declares that annually the loot of schemers through the mails is $1,000,000,000. This is more, he says, than all the money and goods of which thieves avail themselves through robberies, stick-ups and burglary. The government is constantly alert against postal swindlers, and often catches up with them, but there are too many credulous persons and too many schemes for getting hold of their money.—Ohio State Journal.

Robbins Going Modern

A colony of Robbins went in for apartment houses at Bloomington, Ill., this spring. On the first escape of the Bellflower grade school, 11 nests were started, each a step above the other, and four were soon completed. Eggs were laid in three, and one bird was always on guard.

Every motorist would do well to remember the old railroad man's slogan: "It is always train time a grade crossing."—2204

The Coronation

The Past Speaks To The Present In The Language Of Symbolism

The genius of Britain is the guardian of the ancient rite—a genius for continuity. But the rite itself, unique in its majestic perpetuation, is international in its appeal to the eye, the ear, the imagination and, above all, to the inescapable and subconscious instincts which are shared by all people.

At this Coronation, the past speaks to the present in the language of a vivid symbolism that all can understand. The crown, the sceptre, the orb, the vestments, the sacred oil of anointing express more than the sovereignty of a King-Empress over a far-flung realm. Here is enthroned the never-ending sovereignty of man himself over his kingdom of opportunity and achievement. Faced by the mechanical which sometimes appals us as a Frankenstein's monster of our own synthetic invention, the mystical this day proclaims that man is still the master.

In the Coronation, the citizens of the Americas discern and claim a heritage. Every country in Europe has renewed its youth by migration overseas. In every country of origin there have been coronations; and of particular interest to the United States is a coronation in Westminster Abbey. Not only did the Kings and Queens of England reign over the 13 colonies. The oath of the King-Empress that he will observe the law and customs of the nation is little different in principle from the loyalty which all in authority owe to the Constitution of this country.—New York Times.

Airship Service Considered

Great Britain May Again Build Lighter-Than-Air Craft

When the R-101 airship crashed at Beauvais, France, on October 4, 1930, during her maiden flight to India, Great Britain decided to forego any further experiments with lighter-than-air craft. This catastrophe followed on the heels of the successful flight of the R-100 to Montreal, which it appeared that Great Britain was making a bid to parallel the achievements of German airships.

In the period of more than six years which has elapsed since the R-101 disaster, Great Britain has given little attention to public flights by this type of air-vessel, but in a cable the London correspondent of the Star said the Air Ministry has under consideration the question of using airships for civil aviation and that there are rumors current in London that a company may be formed to operate an airship service between England and St. Hubert, with other services to India and South Africa in the near future.—Montreal Star.

Explanation Of Method Whereby New Wheat Varieties Resist Rust

Stresses Need For Trees

Lord Tweedsmuir Asks Policy Of Afforestation For Canada

Planting one of the thousands of oak seedlings sent to Canada by King George from the woods of Windsor castle, Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada, expressed the hope Canada would adopt a general policy of afforestation.

Following the coronation observance in front of the petiole tower on Parliament Hill in Ottawa His Excellency proceeded to the west slope near the statue of Queen Victoria, and, wielding a silver spade especially made for the occasion, performed the planting ceremony.

It would be a peril to Canada's great forest resources to continue cutting down trees without replanting, His Excellency said.

The seedling was presented to His Excellency by Rev. Dr. H. J. Keith, Ottawa, who represented the Canadian Association "Men of Trees" to which had been entrusted by His Majesty the task of distributing for planting the thousands of seedlings and acorns sent from the forest of royal oaks at Windsor park.

Serve As Inspiration

Women Do Much To Foster Music States Adjudicator

Women do much to foster music from the time they croon lullabies to their babies in the cradle to the later time when they "drag their husbands to concerts," Dr. Frederick Staton, adjudicator at the music festival in Winnipeg, told the Women's Canadian Club. His subject was "Music and Women."

Of course, the adjudicator admitted in an aside, men had their points; they were "more honest in their likes and dislikes," once they were at the concert, they didn't hesitate in "preferring Offenbach to Bach often."

"Woman's first relation to music is as an inspirer. Who sits beside the child and encourages him to practice? Well, it wasn't my father who did—he tried to make me a medical man; it was only through my mother's efforts I was able to study music," Dr. Staton said.

As for choral societies, 70 per cent of their members were women; most of the 11,000 contestants in the festival this year were girls and women; Toronto diploma classes and concert audiences both had an "enormous percentage of women."

A pair of rare blue sheep, captured in China, have been sent to the zoo in Washington. About the only wild animal which has succeeded in eluding mankind is the pink elephant which is frequently seen, but never captured.

Now That Wheat Varieties Resistant To Stem Rust Have Been Produced

The question of how they manage to resist rust may arouse some interest.

Rust is caused by a minute fungus parasite of microscopic size which has the power of penetrating into the tissues of resistant and susceptible varieties alike. This fungus is a true parasite in that it thrives only in the living tissues of the plant. In susceptible wheat varieties the plant tissues are not immediately killed but show a remarkable tolerance to the rust fungus which spreads rapidly and absorbs nourishment from the still living plant cells until the plant, riddled with its infections, dries up and dies. Resistant varieties show no such tolerance of the fungus. The rust fungus enters their tissues in the same manner as in susceptible varieties but there the similarity ends. The invaded portion of the plant tissue soon shows signs of decay and its death is soon followed by the death of the invading rust fungus which, as already mentioned, thrives only in living plant cells. So small are these plants that it is difficult to spread the rust that frequently they are invisible to the naked eye. Thus the damage done by the rust to highly-resistant varieties is almost negligible.

The question of resistance and susceptibility is complicated by the fact that stem rust of wheat is composed of a large number of strains which differ from each other in their parasitic powers. More than 140 such strains are now known. To be rust-resistant a variety must possess resistance to all the strains of stem rust prevalent in the region where it is grown. Marquis is classified as a susceptible wheat, for, although it is resistant to about one-half of the known strains of stem rust, it is very susceptible to many of the others. That resistance, although it is considerable, does not suffice to save it from the ravages of stem rust.

The new rust-resistant wheat varieties possess various degrees of resistance. Thatcher is immune from a great number of rust strains but is moderately susceptible to others. Remond and Apex, which is susceptible to some rust strains in the seedling and early stages of growth, acquire a high resistance to apparently all strains by the time the plants are about half grown. The susceptibility of these varieties in the early growth stages is of little significance as stem rust does not usually arrive in the spring wheat region until the plants have acquired this resistance.

The King's Champion

One Family Has Held Office For Five Centuries

Clad in shining armor and mounted on a fiery steed—"The second best horse in the land"—white-haired, 71-year-old Frank Somers Dymoke, of Scrivelsby Court, Horncastle, Lincs., could have burst into the Coronation banquet and challenged anyone who disputed King George VI's right to the Throne to mortal combat.

He is the King's Champion, a hereditary office held since feudal times by the Dymoke family.

He received authority from the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, to carry the Standard of England at the Coronation.

For five centuries the Dymoke family have "flung down the gauntlet with becoming manhood," and Mr. Dymoke, although he now leads the life of a hermit, glories in the medieval traditions of his ancestors.

In his great mansion, hemmed by 2,000 acres of parklands, iron-studded doors of Gothic design, shut him off from the world.

When Greek Meets Greek

An American, staying in a London hotel was introduced to an Aberdonian who asked him:

"An' what country do you belong to?"

"The greatest country in the world," replied the American.

"Man, so dee I," replied Sandy, "but you dinna speak like a Scotsman."

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Queen Mary has opened a new wing at the City of London hospital for diseases of the heart and lungs.

The original cast of Napoleon's head, made after his death at St. Helena, was sold for $750 at Christie's.

Marcus Dixon, 16-year-old Oxford schoolboy, fell down a cliff to his death on Lundy Island in the Bristol Channel while photographing wild life.

The United States commerce department credited reciprocal trade agreements with speeding an increase in American exports to the 16 participating nations, including Canada.

A total of 3,893 persons in one day paid 10 shillings ($2.40) each for the privilege of walking through Westminster Abbey and gazing at the spot where George VI. was crowned.

Canada's external trade soared nearly $25,000,000 in April compared with April, 1936, according to figures announced by the National Revenue Department.

The London News Chronicle predicted when Prime Minister Baldwin resigns and is raised to the peerage he will be known as the Earl of Clebury or the Earl of Cle, because of the Shropshire origin of his family.

Since reindeer were driven to demarcation Point, 400 miles east of Point Barrow, a threat of famine among the Eskimos had been largely abated, according to Rev. F. C. Klerkeper, of Barrow.

More than 300 rare violins covered by insurance exceeding $2,000,000 were displayed at Cremona, Italy, at opening of an exposition commemorating the 200th anniversary of the death of Antonio Stradivari, master violin-maker.

Idol in Court Case

Sacred Hindoo Image Lost Appeal To British Privy Council

A small, metal female idol, so sacred that she is never touched, figured for 20 years in litigation which has come to an end before the judicial committee of the privy council.

Members of the committee, with the murmur of London's traffic in their ears, can never have heard a stranger story. The idol was constructed about the middle of the 19th century by two Hindoo brothers. They installed her in their home and began to worship her. Their business began to prosper rapidly.

In 1898 two sons of one of the brothers dedicated land to the idol by a deed. Later, there was an arrangement for partition of the property. This led to litigation, and the high court at Fort William, Bengal, held that the idol was entitled only to part of the property specified in the deed and the income from the rest.

It was against this decision that the idol, through her sheait or guardian, appealed to the judicial committee, which upheld the finding of the Bengal court, and ordered the idol to pay costs.

The idol, which is about a foot square by six inches deep, is in the form of a swastika, or rather eight swastikas, all made of different metals and laid one on top of the other. It is kept in a room devoted solely to its worship in a specially built house.

The priest appointed to attend it renders acts of worship, burns incense before it and makes offerings of sweetmeats and flowers, which are afterwards given to the poor. It is a common thing among certain Hindoo families, particularly in Bengal, to establish such family idols. Trusts are formed under a special Hindoo law, under which property is vested in the idol in perpetuity.

The Usual Celebration

On his 82nd birthday, George Maurer, Dale, N.Y., went through with his annual headstand as scheduled, but his worried wife refused to witness it. Maurer, farmer and former blacksmith, has done this on each birthday for the last 20 years. He explained his wife had objected to the acrobatic trick "because he was too old a man."

Living was cheap in the old days. Junior's happiness was provided for with a stick of licorice instead of a tank full of gasoline.

The Great Canadian Bird Sanctuary

Miner Sanctuary At Kingsville Is World Famous

Everyone knows of the wonderful bird refuge at Kingsville, Ontario, Canada, and the humanitarian work conducted there by Mr. Jack Miner.

"It is no exaggeration to say that the Miner sanctuary at Kingsville is world famous," says the Toronto Globe.

From all quarters of this continent and from lands beyond the sea, visitors each year make a pilgrimage to this shrine to view a work, the fame of which has travelled far and wide. Mr. Miner is to-day, one of the great naturalists of the world, and his lessons of kindness have been the means of instilling into countless young hearts, a deep and lasting love for birds and all the wild things of nature.

Jack Miner is a poor man, but his home and bird sanctuary are beautiful. The sanctuary has been beautified with hundreds upon hundreds of trees. It requires a fund of $20,000 annually to maintain the place, feed the birds, and supply labor connected with its upkeep.

Jack Miner's friends have incorporated what is known as "The Jack Miner Migratory Bird Foundation," with the hope of raising a trust fund by gifts or bequests, of one million dollars, to perpetuate the place and make the famed spot an international park, where young and old can go and see the birds alive. As one writer has said, "A park for the people of America, surrounded by the Christian influence of God's living creatures."

Any person of wealth wishing to contribute by direct gift or bequest, can get full particulars and a 16-page, well-illustrated booklet, free of charge and postpaid, by writing The Jack Miner Migratory Bird Foundation Inc., at Kingsville, Ontario, Canada.

Irish Music

Adjudicator Says Ireland Has Much To Learn From Canada

Northern Ireland has much to learn from the young people of Canada according to D. T. Yacannini, licentiate of the Royal Academy of Music and one of the judges at the Carrickfergus festival.

During his visit to Canada, he said, the instrumental work he heard would take one's breath away. On one occasion in Winnipeg, more than 400 competitors took part in the violin and piano classes.

Entries were small in the instrumental section at the festival and Yacannini confessed he was disappointed with the performances. Carrickfergus is a few miles north of Belfast.

After all, there's quite a bit to be said in favor of an inferiority complex. For instance, when you meet it on the highway it doesn't cling to seven-tenths of the available pavement.

CASUALTIES AT THE CORONATION

So great was the crowd that witnessed the coronation in London that numerous casualties were recorded. This picture shows the busy ambulance men administering first aid to a woman spectator who fainted in the throng. This is a radio soundphoto.

Would Take Time

It would take three years to increase the output of beef in Great Britain, two years to increase mutton, and one year to increase bacon production in a national emergency. Those calculations were given to the British House of Commons by the minister of agriculture.

In the preference of Americans, beef ranks first and pork second.

Devotional reading: Psalm 32:1-5.

Explanations And Comments

Jacob's Dream at Bethel, 28:10-15. Jacob was fleeing from Esau's wrath and was on his way to Haran. Quite by accident, as it would seem from the expression "He lighted upon a certain place," he came to a hillside near Bethel, and remained there all night.

For a pillow, he could find nothing better at hand than the stones about him, and one of them he put under his head as he lay down to sleep. Such a practice is common in Africa to the present time. When Bishop Taylor returned from Africa he had no use for soft pillows, and more than once substituted a headrest of books.

On Jacob's dream-ladder the angels of God were ascending and descending, symbolizing the thought that there is communication between heaven and earth. Jacob knew that God is; now he learned that God is accessible. When he was at home, his life was made comfortable by the favoritism of Rebekah his mother, there was room in his life for a revelation from God. When alone on the rocky hillside, with no one to help him, God opened him susceptible to divine influence. Providence often thus prepares the way for revelation.

And then in Jacob's dream Jehovah appeared beside him and spoke words of encouragement and hope. Just as the story landscape where we are living was woven into his dream, so were the words of his father Isaac in that parting blessing: "God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and thou shalt dwell in the land of thy sojourn, and thou shalt come into the land of thy inheritance, which I gave unto Abraham," verses 3, 4. He heard God promise that he should inherit the land, that his descendants should be "as the dust of the earth" in number, and in him and in them "all the families of the earth should be blessed." And then God added the assurance of his companionship and guidance: "And behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee whithersoever thou goest."

Jacob wrestles with an Angel, 32:22-30. Midnight came. Jacob had sent his family across the ford of the Jabbok and was alone. Memories of the past crowded upon him, and he was much humbled in spirit. He was alone, and he was grasping at a mysterious combatant who wrestled with him till break of day: neither prevailing nor being prevailed upon. Jacob's thigh was put out of joint. Weak though he then was, he persevered in the struggle, saying, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me." For he realized that his combatant was God. "What is thy name?" "Jacob." "Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for thou hast striven with God, and with men, and has prevailed." And he blessed him there. And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel, that is, The Face of God.

Thus pictorially is Jacob's agonized prayer described. Dr. Horace Bushnell calls the story a parable acted, a case where the lesson is taught, not by words but by something that is done, and so beautifully is the wrestling with the Jehovah angel adjusted to the analogies of prayer that its teaching is most explicit and instructive. Jacob's name was changed because his character was changed. The double-dealing, crooked-working man was honest at last; the self-trusting man became God-trusting. From this time onward, although he did not lose his politic self-resourcefulness, he became more and more "a prince with God, a just and God-fearing Israelite."

Talking For Eighteen Days Caused Death Of Florida Farmer

After talking for 18 days without ceasing, Howard Stillman, a farmer, died at Oklawaha, Florida.

His last words—he died in the 418th hour of his uncontrollable flow of speech—were mumbblings about the Bible.

Mr. Stillman, aged 44, talked in a perfectly normal manner, except for the unusual nature of his conversation, when he was first stricken by the strange disease. He answered questions rationally, and discussed topics of the day intelligently. At intervals he sang.

Then he began to eat very little, and to sleep only when under the influence of drugs. Day by day he grew weaker; his fever mounted; even in his sleep his lips moved constantly.

Doctors state that his case is only the second of its kind in medical history.

Worry is as useless as it is to tell people not to worry. 2204

Gardening

The more tender sorts of vegetables are beans, tomato plants, squash, cucumbers and melons. They will not start to grow until the weather and soil really become warm. All garden tomatoes should be staked, using either wooden or steel stakes about six feet high. Trim off all side shoots as they develop, training the main stem up along the stake and tying loosely about every foot.

All these warm-weather vegetables prefer rich, open soil and any members of the melon family; that is, squash, cucumber, citron, etc., take special delight in hot sandy soil, though it must be made rich with well-rotted manure or good garden fertilizer.

Dry weather will seldom affect a constantly cultivated garden. Stirring of the top soil prevents evaporation of moisture and it also keeps down those robbers of plant food and wateredness. Especially during the early part of the season is cultivation necessary and more particularly after each shower.

Even in the more northerly sections of Canada it will soon be time to plant the tender flowers such as dahlias, gladioli and cannas. None of these, with the possible exception of gladioli, will stand frost, but because all are bulbs or corms and are planted several inches below the ground, they will stand out but before the shoots appear, will not do any damage. Rules are given for the planting of these garden soil is preferred by all three, though good results from dahlias can be obtained in almost any kind of soil. The bulbs or corms should be planted from about four to six inches deep for dahlias and from three to four for the larger dahlias and cannas. All prefer an open position, though with some dahlias all flowers are vivid coloring, a position which is slightly shaded around noon is preferable to the full sun, as the flowers, when bleached out by the hot sun, will benefit from a thorough soaking during the hot, dry weather.

Telephones In France

May Soon Rival United States In Their Use

France soon may rival the United States in the number of telephones and their use by the general public. To-day France boasts almost a million and a half telephones installed in homes and offices, or one for every 35 inhabitants of the country.

Telephone operators in France soon will be overworked, to judge by the figures issued by the ministry. Last year there were 900,000 calls, or 1,737 calls per minute on an average.

In busy parts of the day this number naturally is much higher.

International calls to London, New York, Tokio, Shanghai, Sydney, Moscow, Berlin, Bucharest and other centres totalled 3,500,000 during the year. It is calculated that French callers can be put in touch with any one of 30,000,000 telephones in every corner of the world within ten minutes at the most.

Among the services which have been instituted in Paris by telephone officials are a service for medical aid, a time bureau which is operated by an automatic clock with a mechanical voice which repeats the hour every ten seconds, an alarm clock service to awaken people and finally an automatic taxi call service.

Will Keep Wartime Promise

Welsh Peer Entertaining Men He Led In France

Lord Davies of Llandinam will fulfil soon a promise he shouted to his men as he led them "over the top" in France, 22 years ago. Unemployed miners, teachers, business men, and others from all parts of Wales will be guests at his home for a fortnight in July. During the war Lord Davies was Colonel in the Royal Welch Fusiliers. As he led one attack, he called along the line that all who came through should spend a fortnight at his home. Now the invitations have gone out. Ex-Private George Bennett in Connecticut, may be one of the numerous who is accompanying a Welsh-American contingent to the National Eisteddfod at Machynieth.

Heavy Nickel Production

Production of nickel reached the record total of 18,193,941 pounds in March, it was announced by the Dominion bureau of statistics. Increased production probably was due to armament plants in Europe. For the first three months of the year, nickel production totalled 51,697,323 pounds, almost 6,000,000 pounds higher than the corresponding period last year and almost 23,000,000 pounds higher than in 1935.

RINGING MESSAGE TO THE YOUTH OF THE EMPIRE

London.—Prime Minister Baldwin delivered a ringing message to the youth of the empire, charging them to uphold democracy and defend it against attacks from without and within.

In an address which he termed "the last speech I will make before a great audience as prime minister of this country," Baldwin told them the British empire "neither defies the state nor its rulers."

Canadian boys and girls stood out among the audience of 9,000 in Royal Albert hall by the uniformity of their costume. The boys wore crimson blazers with "Canada" in gold letters on their breast pockets. The girls wore blue skirts and berets, and white jumpers.

The Duke of Gloucester paid a surprise, unscheduled visit to the gathering to deliver a message from the king and queen in which hope was expressed for success of the Empire youth rally. Former colonial secretary Leopold Amery presided.

Baldwin, whose resignation is expected shortly, emphasized the importance of problems that will face future governments, declaring:

"It may well be that you will have to save democracy from itself."

"The old doctrine of the divine right of kings has gone but we have no intention of erecting in its place the new doctrine of the divine right of the state," he said, "for no state ever was or is worthy of a free man's worship."

The prime minister told the gathering "the young king and queen whom we have delighted to honor on these memorable days are servants of a sovereign people. To them they have dedicated themselves. That is the magic of a monarchy that is everlasting. The king is the symbol of union, not only of an empire but a society which is held together by a common view of the fundamental nature of man."

Baldwin, asserting Europe was neither at war nor at peace but "at armed attention," added:

"For every soldier who died at the front another is taking his place. For every ship sent to the bottom of the sea another rides the waves. And for every aeroplane brought down to earth 20 sail the skies. * * * That in itself is a sufficiently melancholy reply to all the efforts of lovers of peace."

In reference to the League of Nations he asked whether the league or the Versailles treaty that ended the Great War should be entered on the credit side.

"Twenty years ago we should all have said 'yes.' To-day the reply would be doubtful, for both have belied the hopes of mankind and they have given way to disillusion."

Baldwin said the big problem of the coming quarter century would be the problem of government. He urged his hearers to take an interest in government.

"From to-night onward, and all your lives," he said, "put your duty first and think about your rights afterwards."

Declaring, "I have had my hour and will soon pass into the shade," the prime minister told his audience: "you are the governors of the future. You are in charge of our honor and all our hopes."

He said democracy as well as dictatorship needed courage, discipline, efficiency and leadership. Alluding to the warlike state of the world, the prime minister said:

"Peace in some quarters is proclaimed as a bad dream and war is glorified as the ideal for rational men. As long as the British empire lasts we will raise our voices against these false gods." The statement drew loud cheers from the youthful audience.

The prime minister then made his reference to the king as the servant of the people and ended with the advice:

"Use men as ends and never merely as means, and live for the brotherhood of man which implies the fatherhood of God."

Baldwin spoke earnestly and with marked emotion. He received an ovation before he left the platform, which was continually interrupted by cheering.

Sabotage In B.C.

Eleven Buildings Destroyed Or Damaged In West Kootenay

Nelson, B.C.—British Columbia police were despatched to two widely-separated centres in the predominantly Doukhobor-settled West Kootenay interior to investigate possible recurrences of sabotage which has already destroyed or damaged 11 buildings since April 4.

Corporal C. W. A. Barwis was sent to Winlaw, B.C., 10 miles to the northwest, where a farm building was razed. The blaze was reported by C. S. Jones, one of a score of guards posted around schools and public buildings after the April outbreaks.

From Castlegar, B.C., 25 miles west, police learned all but one of the clamps holding the mooring cable on the Columbia river ferry had been removed. Prompt discovery of the tampering prevented the boat being swept down the swift-running river.

The two investigations began less than 24 hours after provincial officers at Grand Forks, B.C., 80 miles southwest of here, reported a 16-year-old Doukhobor youth had admitted placing obstructions on the main line Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near that town.

No threat has been laid against the youth, pending instruction from British Columbia police headquarters at Victoria.

Air Mail Across Atlantic

United States Postmaster-General Looks For Service Within A Year

New York.—Trans-Atlantic airmail service will be a reality within a year, James A. Farley, United States postmaster-general, declared here as he opened a new postoffice building in downtown New York.

"The recent splendid achievement of Dick Merrill emphasized once more that trans-Atlantic airmail is imminent," he said of the round-trip flight Merrill and John Lambie completed recently.

"Within a year, certainly within the next calendar year, we can expect to have airmail across the Atlantic," Farley said. "This government is co-operating with foreign governments to bring this about."

Fresh Fish Export Trade

Ottawa.—A conference of government officials interested in the fresh fish export trade to the United States will be held here this week, it was announced by officials of the trade and commerce department. Representatives are expected from Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The main purpose of the conference will be to establish a credit investigation bureau in New York as a protection against fishermen sending goods on consignment to persons who later prove financially irresponsible.

The Remains of Viscount Snowden Are Cremated

Woking, Surrey.—The remains of Viscount Snowden—who as Philip Snowden was chancellor of the exchequer in three governments—were cremated at St. John's crematorium here.

The service, which was private, was conducted by Rev. H. J. Taylor of Woking, a friend of the family. He paid tribute to the late chancellor as one who had "done a brave day's work for all the people."

Arrests In Moscow

Moscow.—The entire secretariat of the Central Trade Union Council, except its chief, U. M. Shvernik, was out of office and classified as "enemies of the people" as the government campaign against Trotskyites and "wreckers" swept through the trade union system. Arrest of the council leaders was announced after a plenary session by Shvernik.

The Former Enemy

London.—"The former enemy" will no longer be so termed in official communications of the British Legion, it was decided at the closing session of the veterans' annual conference here. It is expected the name of the country referred to will be used instead.

To Humanize War

Ask Factions In Spain To Abandon Bombing From The Air

London.—The international non-intervention committee decided to ask both factions in Spain's civil war to abandon "entirely the use of bombing from the air."

The belligerents will also be urged to "humanize" the war in other ways, though the committee did not say how this was to be done. A draft of the appeal is to be drawn up for approval at the next meeting of the committee.

Many Volunteers Slain

Estimated Third Lose Lives In Spanish Conflict

Madrid.—American volunteer battalions in the Spanish civil war were estimated to have lost almost a third of their number in death.

Reliable sources placed the number of United States citizens killed while fighting on the government side at more than 500, or 30 per cent. of the 1,700 reported to have enlisted since the conflict started 10 months ago.

Military observers estimated 1,000 British volunteers have enlisted on the government side and that 600 of these have been killed.

The number of French volunteers was placed at 15,000, of whom 3,000 have been slain.

An overwhelming majority of the American volunteers lacked previous military experience. The largest contingent was the 16th infantry, or Abraham Lincoln battalion. This group originally was composed of 487 men who entered Spain in December and January and went into the thick of the action on the Bana-ma river south of Madrid on Feb. 12.

Jurist To Retire

United States Supreme Court Judge Sends Letter To President

Washington.—Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter informed President Roosevelt he would retire from active service on the United States Supreme Court bench on June 2.

The 78-year-old jurist, who has been known as a member of the so-called Conservative wing of the court, made his intention known in a letter to the president.

Until the beginning of the present term of court last October, Van Devanter had voted against administration action or laws 12 times and for it once in litigation before the tribunal.

This term, however, he voted in line with the administration nine times and against it three times.

Three Masted Schooner

St. Catharines, Ont.—A three masted schooner, the Fantome II, private yacht of Hon. Ernest Guinness of London, passed through the Welland canal. With a crew of 32, the vessel crossed the Atlantic in 17½ days and is Chicago-bound. From there she will go on a cruise early next month through the lakes and to New York.

Move To Higher Ground

London, Ont.—Many residents want to move out of the area affected by the disastrous flood three weeks ago. Five home-owners have filed applications for city-owned lots with a view to moving their houses. The city indicated it was agreeable to trading lots on higher ground.

Among the most colorful participants in the Coronation festivities in London were the four orderlies from India who were in attendance upon His Majesty. This picture shows the orderlies when they visited Buckingham Palace.

SAYS IRISH FREE STATE IS LOSING BRITISH MARKET

Dublin.—A charge the Irish Free State was allowing trade opportunities to slip through non-attendance at the imperial conference, whereas Canada considered trade so important she sent a group of ministers and the prime minister to discuss preliminary arrangements, was made by John Costello of the opposition as the deal between the conference.

As trade figures proved, Costello said, Canada knew how to do business. He read extracts from an Ottawa blue book on the publicity and other activities of the Canadian high commissioner in London and argued the Free State was "cutting off its nose to spite its face." While the Free State wrestled with formula, Canada and the other dominions slipped in and collared the Irish share of the British market.

President De Valera, in a speech the opposition declared was directed at delegates to the imperial conference rather than the Irish public, restated his policy in regard to Great Britain and the problems of partition of Ireland and land annuities.

Although matters of interest were being discussed at London, he said, the Free State was not represented because a grave misunderstanding would result through attendance.

"If we went it would be assumed the Anglo-Irish position had reached a point that the Free State is able to sit in as a people whose differences have been settled," he said.

The Free State would have walked out of the 1932 Ottawa economic conference, had it not gone on the invitation of the friendly Canadian government, because of Britain's attitude the Free State's word could not be trusted.

Outstanding matters must be settled before co-operation and good feeling were possible between Britain and the Free State, he said.

"The chief problem is partition, due primarily to the action of British politicians who divided the country, setting up a foreign parliament not corresponding to reality."

If the British said, "we cannot coerce Ulster" then his reply would be: "Why coerce half the Ulster area. If there is to be no coercion then apply the principle all round."

Dealing with annuities he asserted amid applause of his supporters that so long as he remained in office he would refuse to hand over a single penny.

A chorus of opposition interruptions declared: "Are not the British collecting the full amount since you made the coal-cattle pact?"

De Valera replied: "The money is being extracted from us by superior strength, in spite of the will of the people. If we wanted to go back we could count the annuities were money payable to persons who confiscated Irish land, driving out Irish people."

Waving documents, the president challenged any deputy to produce house records showing ratification.

"I want everyone to remember," he said, "that the economic war (between Great Britain and the Free State) is due to the unbound bargains of the opposition."

"England is not paying her war debt to the United States, contending the burden is too great. That debt amounted to $3.66 per head of the population of Great Britain, while the annuities amounted to $8.33 a head of the population of the Free State. How much heavier is the Free State burden?" he demanded.

Frank McDermott, opposition, agreed the British, historically, had the main responsibility for partition. But partition now was free to the state of feeling in Northern Ireland. If relations could not be made satisfactory except by desertion of the British by their kith and kin in Northern Ireland then he predicted relations would never become satisfactory.

"WHAT! NO GEAR SHIFT LEVER?"

"No, indeed, I said good-bye to the old-fashioned way of driving the day I first tried Hudson's Selective Automatic Shift. No hand gear lever to pull; no need to touch a clutch pedal. A flick of a finger... a touch of a toe... To shift! To stop! To go! Lots easier, and lots safer! It's the greatest driving feature of the year, in automobiles that are the finest I have ever seen, in every way. Of course, the conventional gear lever is available without cost if you want it. But just drive once this new way... and you'll say 'good-bye, gear shift lever, too!'"

Inaccuracies by Mr. Aberhart.

(Edmonton Journal, May 19.)

Many people in Alberta would have greater respect for Mr. Aberhart if he could get over a bad habit of twisting what the other fellow says into something which he can answer easily. An illustration of how he does this sort of thing cropped up last Sunday evening when he "answered" the so-called charge of the Edmonton Presbytery of the United Church that, in the phraseology used by Mr Aberhart, his Sunday services contained "too much of politics and an inadequate amount of religion."

Of course the Presbytery's resolution said nothing of the kind—and a good many people are sure that Mr Aberhart knew that it made no comparison of quantities of politics and religion. The text of the resolution passed by the Presbytery early this month and published in The Journal May 8, is as follows:

Whereas the radio is being used in the province of Alberta on Sunday and in other parts of the Dominion for the purpose of broadcasting partisan political propaganda and commercial advertising;

And whereas such misuse of the radio tends to the secularisation of the Sabbath;

Be it resolved that we, the Edmonton Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, do hereby petition the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to make such regulations as will eliminate these two forms of Sunday broadcasting;

And further, Be it resolved that copies of this Resolution be sent to the leaders of all political parties.

Mr Aberhart told his audience that he was ready to have the amount of Scriptural and spiritual teaching in his service compared with that in a United Church service and referred to the "true worth" of the remainder of the material used to fill in. But even a thirteen-year-old could tell him that all this was beside the point; that the real question was "partisan political propaganda," to quote the resolution.

Mr. Aberhart should be more careful in reporting what others say.
